Police search for Grant County shooting suspect

Jonesboro man stable after being shot Tuesday afternoon, police say

By ANDREW MACIEJEWSKI
Chronicle-Tribune Editor

Police are still searching for a white man and black woman who fled the scene of a shooting in Jonesboro Tuesday afternoon.

No suspects have been detained or charged as of publication Wednesday.

Police say 18-year-old Sebastian Herrera is currently in stable condition after he was shot at least once in an upstairs apartment at 110 S. First Ave. around 2:30 p.m. Jan. 21. Herrera was flown to a Fort Wayne hospital where Indiana State Police Sgt. Tony Slocum said he was conscious and talking with investigators.

ISP investigators say the purported shooter was a white male wearing a dark hoodie who allegedly fled the scene in a white car that appeared to be an early- to mid-2000s model.

Police are also looking for a black female who fled the scene south from the residence on foot, according to ISP reports.

Slocum told the Chronicle-Tribune Tuesday night that investigators spent hours talking to witnesses to determine what went on inside the apartment before the shooting took place.

"We don't believe that the public at-large is in any danger, but as always if anyone has information about the case, don't be afraid to contact Indiana State Police's Peru Post," Slocum said.

Anyone who has information about this case is asked to contact Indiana State Police Detective Mike Lorona by calling 765-473-6666.

"This is an ongoing investigation," Slocum wrote in his release Wednesday morning. "No further information will be released at this time."

GriefShare support group begins Feb. 5

Weekly program to provide support for those who have lost a loved one

By STAFF REPORT

The Congregational Christian Church has partnered with McKee Mortuary to provide support for those who have lost a loved one, according to a press release.

GriefShare grief recovery support group will meet from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Wednesdays beginning Feb. 5 at the Congregational Christian Church, 310 N. Walnut St., North Manchester.

GriefShare features nationally recognized experts on grief recovery topics.

Seminar sessions include "Is This Normal?" "The Challenges of Grief," "Grief and Your Relationships," "Why?" and "Guilt and Anger."

Each seminar is combined with a small group discussion time to allow group participants to talk about the content of the seminar and about how they are dealing with the death of their loved one.

Participant workbooks can be purchased for $15. Scholarships are available.

"We are pleased to be able to offer this program to our community. Losing a loved one has a long-lasting impact on families and partnering with others to provide resources for healing and hope is a small way for McKee to support our community," stated Joe Egner, of McKee Mortuary.

For more information or to register, call 260-982-2882.

Bringing out the 'big check'

CHECK: Howie Guja, of the Publishers Clearing House Prize Patrol, left, surprises Charity Lane at her door with a "big check" for $50,000 on Thursday.

Publishers Clearing House Prize Patrol surprises Charity Lane with $50K

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

It was just after 10 a.m. Thursday and Charity Lane didn't know it yet, but just blocks away there was a "big check" (and a real, smaller check) for $50,000 with her name on it.

Meanwhile, at The Love Bug Floral, Howie Guja took a half-dozen balloons in assorted colors out of his pocket to be filled to go along with a bouquet he was purchasing.

Each balloon had the insignia of Publishers Clearing House (PCH) printed on the side.

Guja's business card states his title as "PCH Prize Patrol Elite."

"We just go to their house unannounced and we knock on the door," he said, as he waited for the balloons to be filled. "I would say eight out of 10 times they're home. If they're not, hopefully, someone is home who could tell us where they are. And if they're at work we'll go to work. It depends on where it is. We've had some funny stories of going into places where we're not allowed to film so we have to kind of call and lure them outside."

Guja said they one time they had arrived at a winner's house in Maryland who worked two hours at Peach Bottom Atomic Power Station in Pennsylvania. He said once they made the drive to her workplace, they pulled up to the security gate only to be met with guards armed with machine guns at the ready.

"The winning moments you see on TV are real," stated PCH. "They are filmed at the actual moment we award the prize – totally unrehearsed and completely un-staged. We don't notify winners who will be visited by our Prize Patrol in advance; we simply knock on their door with the video cameras rolling. If the winner is not home, we go to great lengths to find them – at work, at play, on vacation – and rarely have to make a return visit. The famous 'Publishers Clearing House Winning Moment' is reality TV at its finest, and our winners are the stars."

Guja said the Prize Patrol will visit winners' houses for prizes starting at $10,000

State of Our Communities to celebrate 2019, share plans for 2020

New countywide growth initiative to be featured

By STAFF REPORT

Grow Wabash County will be hosting the third annual State of Our Communities event on Wednesday, Feb. 12 in Legacy Hall at the Honeywell Center, according to a press release.

Breakfast will begin at 7:30 a.m. and presentations will begin at 8 a.m. The event should conclude around 10 a.m.

"The community is invited to attend the 2020 State of Our Communities event to enjoy breakfast and hear from representatives from each incorporated community in Wabash County about the highlights of 2019 and what they have their sights set on for 2020," stated the release.

Keith Gillenwater, President and CEO of Grow Wabash County, the event's emcee, will be presenting remarks on a new countywide initiative focused on the growth of Wabash County.

"Speakers for this year's event may also be speaking on this exciting new project," stated the release.

This year's line-up of speakers will feature Kristie Bone from the town of Lagro, Bob Ferguson from the town of Roann, Diana Heath from the town of LaFontaine, Allen Miracle from the town of North Manchester and Barry Eppley from the Wabash County Commissioners.

and going all the way up to millions.

"Every week we're doing at least one prize," he said.

Phil Yunker, of Vanguard Media and Entertainment in Indianapolis, was hired to operate the camera that day. He said he had filmed another Prize Patrol winner near Kokomo, but that was for $20,000.

"In 1989 we began notifying sweepstakes winners in person rather than by phone," stated PCH. "Instead of hiring actors to deliver the prizes, we created the Prize Patrol. The PCH Prize Patrol is made up of real PCH employees, who deliver sweepstakes prizes to doorsteps and surprise lucky winners live."

Contrary to popular belief, the late Ed McMahon was never affiliated with the company.

"He formerly worked for a competitor, American Family Publishers, which is no longer in business," stated PCH.

After paying for his purchases inside, Guja and Yunker made their way outside the store to film their departure for the winner's house.

As he clipped his lapel mic on his branded blazer, Guja said he had started working with the company in the photo department when he was asked to try being in front of the camera for a change. After filming a few YouTube videos, he was asked to moonlight on a few Prize Patrol runs.

"I had a blazer and I went out but I wasn't really on the Prize Patrol," he said. "And a year later they said, 'Alright, you're on the Prize Patrol if you want it.' I said, 'Sure.' I went from the photo studio to giving people money now. It's fun."

Guja and Yunker filmed the short introduction and then drove separate vehicles to the location. Once they arrived, Guja climbed the steps and knocked on the door.

"I just saw a curtain move," he said.

The door opened and a bleary-eyed man answered the door.

"I'm looking for Charity Lane," said Guja.

After the man, Josh Lane, confirming this was, in fact, his wife's residence, Charity Lane herself appeared at the door.

"Oh my God, are you publisher's clearing house?" she said.

"This is really happening. This is not a joke," said Guja.

"I've been up all night. My husband works late," she said. "I never won nothing. Oh my God. Thank you so much. I've got a kid graduating high school, so college money. Vacation. My husband and I never had a honeymoon. I really appreciate it. This is the biggest surprise of my life. I am shaking. I am so shaking. This is the craziest thing I've ever seen."

Guja said she had won the prize by returning an offline package insert. Charity Lane said she returned paper mail from Publishers Clearing House all the time, along with playing online games.

"I knew returning those things would pay off," she said. "He kept telling me I was nuts. I was like, 'Nobody returns mail. I am returning this mail.'"

Charity Lane said Josh Lane works third shift at Paper Works Industries.

"I just got out of bed. I stayed up to cook him dinner," she said. "I'm a stay at home mom."

Josh Lane said he didn't know what was going on when he heard the knock at the door.

"I was sitting on the couch about half asleep watching TV," he said.

"I thought it was the police," she said, laughing.

Guja joined the couple in a "money dance" which he said might land them in a future commercial and thus entitle them to another $1,000.

After a few more photos, Charity Lane followed Guja out on to her porch to finish signing the paperwork. Guja said they should save about 30 percent for next year's taxes on the prize. He said they would be sending them a 1099 form in the mail.

Guja pointed to her bare feet and asked if she wanted to put some shoes on before stepping outside.

"I'm too worked up to feel the cold," she said. "It's not every day you win $50,000."

Guja offered one last piece of advice to the couple.

"There's a lot of people out there who pretend to be from Publishers Clearing House," he said. "So, like, scammers they might call you on the phone or on Facebook. And they say, 'Hey, you know what? You won more money, but you have to pay a remittance fee or a tax.' Basically, the catch is always they try to get you to pay something."

And most of these scammers for whatever reason are in Jamaica. And they like spoof numbers. Sometimes I'll get a hold of these numbers and I'll call these people back.

And they'll be like, 'This is Howie Guja from the Prize Patrol,' and I'm like, 'No, I'm Howie Guja from the Prize Patrol.'

Before heading back inside, the couple discussed their options for their long-awaited honeymoon.

"I've been talking Bora Bora for a long time," she said. "I don't even know. There are so many options. We're going to do something. Something maybe we can do the bikes on. We've got Harleys in the back."

'Magic' gloves let acclaimed Brazilian pianist play again were especially developed for him, the pianist could only play songs slowly with his thumbs and, sometimes, his index fingers.

"After I lost my tools, my hands, and couldn't play the piano, it was if there was a corpse inside my chest," Martins told The Associated Press.

Martins' health problems date back to 1965. He famously rebounded after every setback – nerve damage in his arm inflicted during a soccer match in New York, a mugger hitting him over the head with a metal pipe while he toured in Bulgaria, and more. But even friends expected the latest surgery, on his left hand, to mark the end of his days on the piano bench.

That might have been his fate, were it not for a designer who believed the pianist's retirement had come too early. Ubiratã Bizarro Costa created neoprene-covered bionic gloves that bump Martins' fingers upward after they depress the keys, and which are held together by a carbon fiber board.

Trump ends protections for waterways, aiding developers

By ELLEN KNICKMEYER

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Trump administration on Thursday ended federal protection for many of the nation's millions of miles of streams, arroyos and wetlands, a sweeping environmental rollback that could leave the waterways more vulnerable to pollution from development, industry and farms.

The policy change, signed by heads of the Environmental Protection Agency and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, narrows the types of waterways that qualify for federal protection under the half-century-old Clean Water Act.

Since his first weeks in office, President Donald Trump has targeted environmental and public health regulations that he says imposed unnecessary burdens on business.

The change to the clean water rule had long been sought by builders, oil and gas developers, farmers and others. But environmental groups and public-health advocates say the rollback will allow businesses to dump pollutants into newly federally unprotected waterways and fill in some wetlands, threatening public water supplies downstream and harming wildlife and habitats.

EPA head Andrew Wheeler told reporters that states were still free to step in with state protections of newly vulnerable waterways if they chose.

"Our rule protects the environment and our waterways while respecting the rights of states and property owners," Wheeler said. The rollback of the clean-water enforcement "strikes the proper balance between Washington, D.C. and the states," he said.

Brett Hartl, a government affairs director with the Center for Biological Diversity conservation advocacy group, called the changes "a sickening gift to polluters."

The administration's action "will allow wetlands, streams and rivers across a vast stretch of America to be obliterated with pollution," Hartl said, contending the rollback would speed extinction for dozens of endangered species.

Letters may be faxed to 260-563-0816, or email them to news@wabashplaindealer.com with "Letters to the Editor" in the subject line.

DAILY SCRIPTURE

I have stored up your word in my heart, that I might not sin against you.

Psalm 119:11

The material truth: Underlining his obstruction, President Trump says the quiet part loud again

Wednesday, at the Davos conference 4,000 miles from Washington, President Trump boasted about his successful obstruction of the House's investigation of his Ukraine shakedown. Speaking of the impeachment trial, he declared: "Honestly, we have all the material. They don't have the material."

Trump couldn't have wrapped a neater bow around the rather impressive case that House Democrats have still built, obstruction notwithstanding.

In a masterful two-and-a-half-hour opening statement, lead House manager Rep. Adam Schiff laid out what's at stake, making clear why the country can't just wait until November to vote Trump out of office: He's invited foreign interference in elections multiple times, and his behavior demonstrates his willingness to use all levers of government to interfere with any legitimate attempts to prevent further abuse of his power.

Schiff laid out the timeline of the Ukraine pressure campaign, the facts of which are beyond dispute and beyond defense, and effectively used video of Trump himself, aides and cooperative administrative officials to strengthen the case.

Schiff underlined the intense ongoing obstruction that is likely obscuring the depth of the president's involvement in the plot — including the blocked testimony of nine officials subpoenaed by the House.

Which is why much of the integrity of the trial depends on whether more witnesses and documents will be let in.

On Tuesday, during the debate over the trial rules, Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer offered 11 amendments related to hearing from pertinent witnesses — including former national security adviser John Bolton, acting chief of staff Mick Mulvaney and various OMB, State Department and Pentagon staffers — and demanding unquestionably relevant documents.

Eleven times, putting their fealty to a president of their party before their duty to country, Senate Republicans rejected those amendments. For shame. For deep, lasting shame.

Celebrate women's suffrage anniversary

It was Nov. 2, 1920, and women, especially Hoosier women, had fought hard to get to that historic day, the first when they were allowed to cast a legal ballot in national elections.

That's why this commemoration will be more than just a single event it will be a year-long effort to understand what women's suffrage can teach us about the ways that engaged citizens can shape our culture, laws and institutions.

They were there to vote, to have a direct voice in their government, and many of them surely agreed with Indiana Gov. James P. Goodrich that the passage of the 19th Amendment was an act of tardy justice. They also likely knew that it was about much more than a vote and that the battle for equality was not yet over.

As we begin the new year, I, along with my fellow Indiana Women's Suffrage Centennial Commission members, urge Hoosiers to participate in local and national activities that recognize the 100th anniversary of the passage of the 19th Amendment, which granted women the right to vote. We not only want to acknowledge this historic milestone, but we also want to use this year to raise awareness and inspire action in every sector of our state. We want to remember the decades-long battle that preceded women's suffrage and the forgotten heroes who blazed the trail for those of us who so often take our right to vote for granted.

In this way, the Indiana Women's Suffrage Centennial Commission, along with the Indiana Women's Suffrage Centennial, a consortium catalyzed by Indiana Humanities, the Indianapolis Propylaeum, the Indiana Historical Society and the Indiana Historical Bureau, believes our suffrage commemorations should extend beyond observance and lead us to even greater participation in the democratic process.

These days, it can be hard to imagine a time when women were excluded from such a key component of our democracy, but, a century ago, women's suffrage was far from a foregone conclusion. There were even some women who opposed it, and the movement was at times threatened by internal disagreements. Too often, the movement left women of color and working-class women on the sidelines, and when the 19th Amendment did pass, women were'nt automatically included in the full political process. The fight would continue.

That's why this commemoration will be more than just a single event it will be a year-long effort to understand what women's suffrage can teach us about the ways that engaged citizens can shape our culture, laws and institutions.

So, we invite all Hoosiers to learn with us by engaging in several activities. Here are a few of the exciting ways you can participate:

Attend events in your area: Watch for events in your area or organize a women's suffrage commemoration event in your community. Visit IndianaSuffrage100.org to see an online calendar or add your event.

Attend a talk or visit the traveling exhibit: Nearly 40 talks on women's suffrage will be happening all across the state, from Michigan City to Evansville, and a traveling exhibit from the Indiana Historical Society will be spending several weeks at destinations around Indiana. Find something to do in your neck of the woods at IndianaSuffrage100.org.

Ask your elders: Ask women and men who might have known a grandparent or great-grandparent who remembered the fight for women's suffrage.

Teach your children: Share what you learn about women's suffrage with younger generations. Reading lists, classroom materials and primary source documents are all included in the teacher toolkits found at IndianaSuffrage100.org.

Get active: Join a group advocating for a cause near to your heart or contact your elected officials to make your voice heard.

Vote: Claim your rightful place in the voting booth.

That last point might be the most powerful. Exercising your right to vote not only allows you to fully engage in our democratic process, but it can also serve as a lasting tribute to those who fought for so long and sacrificed so much to give us the right to vote and have a direct voice in our government.

HISTORY

Today is Friday, Jan. 24, the 24th day of 2020.

There are 342 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Jan. 24, 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill concluded a wartime conference in Casablanca, Morocco.

On this date:

In 1848, James W. Marshall discovered a gold nugget at Sutter's Mill in northern California, a discovery that led to the gold rush of '49.

In 1935, beer was first sold in cans in Richmond, Virginia, by the Gottfried Krueger Brewing Co.

In 1939, at least 28,000 people were killed by an earthquake that devastated the city of Chile.

In 1945, Associated Press war correspondent Joseph Morton was among a group of captives executed by the Germans at the Mauthausen-Gusen concentration camp in Austria.

In 1965, British statesman Winston Churchill died in London at age 90.

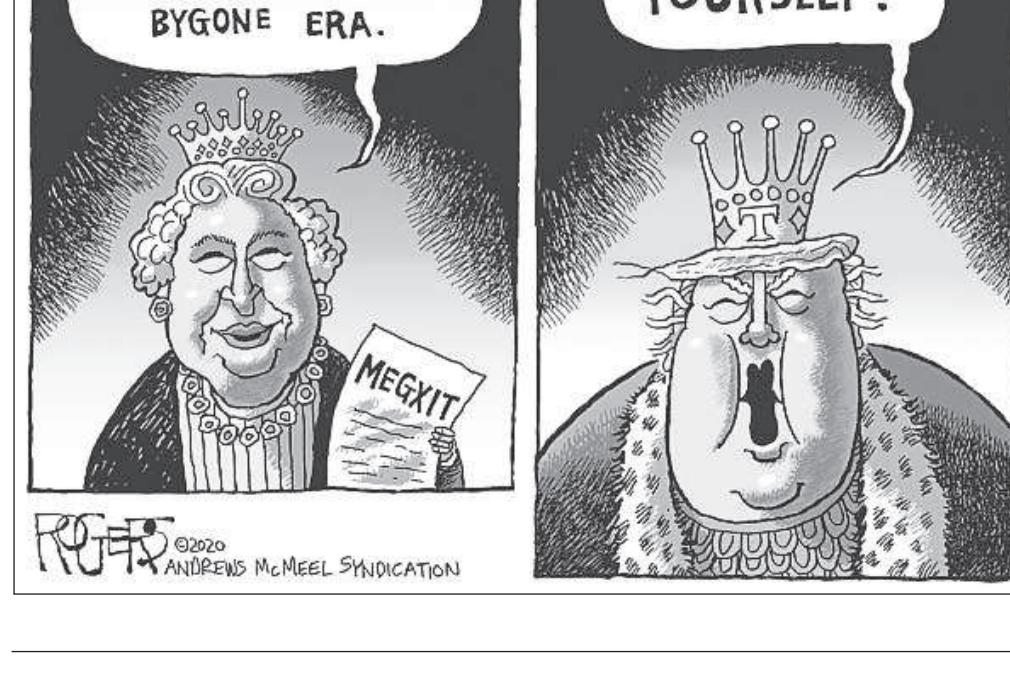

In 1984, Apple Computer began selling its first Macintosh model, which boasted a built-in 9-inch monochrome display, a clock rate of 8 megahertz and 128K of RAM.

In 1985, the space shuttle Discovery was launched from Cape Canaveral on the first secret, all-military shuttle mission.

In 1987, gunmen in Lebanon kidnapped educators Alann Steen, Jesse Turner, Robert Polhill and Mithleshwar Singh. (All were eventually released.)

In 1989, confessed serial killer Theodore Bundy was executed in Florida's electric chair.

In 1993, retired Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall died in Bethesda, Maryland, at age 84.

Trump's low-grade chums

Thanks to President Trump, we are living in a world of sleaze.

It's tough enough keeping count of the former Trump associates who've been indicted, convicted or imprisoned.

With startling regularity, new names emerge on what seems a bottomless list of scoundrels and grifters.

We began this presidential caper, after all, with revelations of a porn star paid off to keep silent about an alleged affair with Trump shortly after Melania Trump had given birth to their son.

Never wonder why so many Americans are disgusted by this president. But what finally brought Trump down were not alleged sins of the flesh but abuse of power and obstruction of Congress — the two charges laid out in articles of impeachment now before the U.S. Senate.

Last week, following the slow tortures of the House impeachment inquiry, a new character emerged in the nick of time to bestir the swamp. In a perverse deus ex machina, this time surfacing from the bowels of the stage, Lev Parnas was last week's man of the moment.

You remember ol' Lev. He and Igor Fruman are the two Rudy Giuliani "associates" who were arrested last October as they were about to board a flight to Europe with one-way tickets.

Parnas, who pled not guilty to charges of conspiracy, false statements and falsification of records, is now suddenly the voice of reason and moral authority as he makes the cable-TV rounds. During an interview with CNN's Anderson Cooper, he nearly glowed with virtue as, referring to Trump, he helpfully intoned, "He's not king," as if America required someone of Parnas' elevated stature to illuminate the masses.

Yes, he told Cooper, he would be willing to testify if the Senate should call him as a witness. Yes, he would definitely connect all the dots. What a genuine, humble guy, no one was thinking.

Parnas must have taken acting lessons during his hiatus. Soft-spoken and almost contrite, it was briefly hard to remember that he was the same guy who says he traveled abroad on behalf of Giuliani and Trump to convey to President Zelensky that there would be no military-aid funds until he announced an investigation into Joe Biden and Biden's son, Hunter.

The funds, of course, were held up and released only after Trump learned of the whistleblower complaint that triggered the impeachment inquiry. After so many months of proceedings, posturing and the usual political hokey-pokey on the Hill, one is almost tempted to query: Is that all you got?

Not to minimize the seriousness of essentially inviting a foreign country to join the Trump campaign or bartering military aid for personal gain. But the answer, if we're honest, is that Democrats will do whatever it takes to eradicate The Don and his minions.

Trump has inflicted his own crude, self-aggrandizing pathologies on the nation, and he brought along a revolving cadre of sycophants and criminals to enable his delusional ambitions. Parnas is but the latest. Parnas was sent abroad to make an offer Zelensky presumably couldn't refuse, plausibly delivered with the finesse of a gangster — Giuliani — if not Corleone-style.

If Parnas is going down, he apparently doesn't plan to be lonely. He has also implicated Attorney General William Barr and Vice President Mike Pence, who, Parnas says, were all in the now-storied "loop." Both Barr and Pence deny it. And, of course, there's Giuliani, who has been tangled in his own web of weirdness for some time. Whatever legacy he once had as America's mayor following 9/11, he has surrendered it to ego and a rapacious appetite for relevancy.

Whether Parnas will be invited to tell his tale under oath before the Senate seems doubtful, but he'll find plenty of company among his predecessors in the presidential purgatory he has now entered. In Trump's underworld, disloyalty is usually rewarded with some fresh, new hell.

Coexist and still confess Christ?

By JERRY GAUTHIER
Pastor, Zion Lutheran Church

You see it on bumper stickers, billboards, and even on t-shirts. It attractively uses symbols of world religions to spell out, "COEXIST." In such pluralistic times, the fact is people want peace. For most, coexist simply means to believe what you want and let others do the same. This can fall prey to a "privatized religion" mentality, which invites godless secularization and even liquidates all religions. Coexisting is not the issue only the question, "What kind of peace are we promoting?"

As Christians, there is no doubt that to live in peace is the natural goal to have with our neighbor. St. Paul says, "If possible, so far as it depends on you, live peaceably with all" (Romans 12:18).

At the same time, Jesus had shocking words to say to His disciples like, "Do not think that I have come to bring peace to the earth. I have not come to bring peace, but a sword" (Matthew 10:34). This was not a call to arms for when the enemies of Jesus came take Him away. He told Peter, "Put your sword back into its place..." (Matthew 26:52).

If coexist means living peacefully with one another, "Amen" a hundredfold! If coexist seeks a bigger claim to make all religions the same where everyone goes to heaven and nothing else needs to be said. Then Jesus parts ways with the sword of His Word saying, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me" (John 14:6). Of course, that sword would finally be His cross where God suffered and died for a sinful world. A distinction must be made with peace as it comes to us in terms of "Law and Gospel."

The Law is not an exclusively Christian claim for we find it in nature, our hearts, and texts beyond the Bible. All religions trying to win God's favor by works are religions of the Law. It turns anyone to either despair that sees no hope in works or pride to think works are what will save. However, the Gospel stands out as the exclusive claim that doing things to win God's favor misses out completely on what God has already done for us.

The Lord is not into making a deal saying, "You do this and I will do this." Jesus did it all by fulfilling the Law's demands by His perfect life, death and resurrection. Since God cannot coexist with sinful humanity, He gave us His Son. Jesus has done away with religions redeeming us with His peace that passes all understanding. St. Paul speaks to a pluralistic world, "For, being ignorant of the righteousness of God, and seeking to establish their own, they did not submit to God's righteousness. For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes" (Romans 10:2-4). We can more than coexist. Christians humbly confess with love the Gospel. God's gift of peace is what the world can never give.

Cleveland bishop named Philadelphia's next archbishop

By COREY PERRINE and NICOLE WINFIELD
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The bishop of Cleveland will become the new leader of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, the Vatican announced Thursday, making him the first Hispanic archbishop to lead the region's 1.3 million-member flock.

Nelson Perez, who spent most of his early pastoral career in the Philadelphia area, was introduced Thursday in a news conference at the archdiocese's Philadelphia headquarters. He will succeed Archbishop Charles Chaput, a conservative culture warrior who is stepping down after turning 75 last year, the traditional retirement age for Catholic bishops.

Chaput welcomed Perez to his new post, which he will assume Feb. 18. He called his successor "a man who already knows and loves the church in Philadelphia."

Perez shared his enthusiasm for the city, saying "it's awesome to be back in Philadelphia with people who are faith-filled, who love the Lord, love the church."

Perez also praised Chaput's tenure in the diocese, saying he faced challenges in Philadelphia with "great courage and steadfastness."

Perez, 58, attended the diocesan seminary in Philadelphia in the 1980s and served in a number of Philadelphia parishes before being named as an auxiliary bishop in Rockville Centre, New York, and then bishop of Cleveland in 2017.

On Thursday, Perez also addressed church sex abuse victims, telling them "I, and we, continue to pray for your healing and support and hold you deep within our hearts — those who have been hurt. It should have never happened, and we are sorry."

Perez has had to deal with that issue while in Cleveland. The diocese last year made public a list of 22 previously unidentified priests and other clergy it said had been credibly accused of sexually abusing minors. Perez said in a letter announcing the release of the names that a committee assembled by the diocese determined that the accusations against the clerics were "more likely than not to be true."

SPIRITUAL CONDITIONING

All of the skill and technology in an operating room is dedicated to one purpose...the assurance that the patient will be restored to health. There is one condition, however, that all the skill of the surgical team cannot control - the condition of the patient's spirit. It has been proven that those patients with a hopeful, positive, and faithful attitude have a significantly greater chance of survival and recovery. We can learn a faithful attitude by studying God's Word. A practice of positive spiritual conditioning at your house of worship each week could save your life.

Apaches rout Cass at home

Wabash's girls' basketball team opened up an 11-2 lead in the first quarter at home against the Kings on Wednesday and rode that to a 46-21 win. Mariah Wyatt and Alivia Short had 15 and 13 points, respectively.

Patriots rookie arrested after being stopped for speeding

CROSSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — New England cornerback Joejuan Williams faces charges after being stopped by a Tennessee Highway Patrol trooper for speeding on Interstate 40 on Jan. 17.

The trooper stopped Williams, the 45th pick overall in the 2019 NFL draft, at 9:37 p.m. near mile marker 333 in Cumberland County. Williams, 22, was arrested for speeding along with possession of a controlled substance, possession of legend drugs without a prescription and possession of drug paraphernalia, according to information from the THP.

Williams reportedly posted a $37,500 bond and was released Jan. 18 from the Cumberland County Jail with a hearing set for Feb. 21.

USOPC to fund professional staff to help athletes council

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic and Paralympic Committee struck a deal to provide $525,000 this year for its athletes council to hire professional staff to help the council's volunteer leaders navigate the thorny issues that surround the Olympic movement.

The USOPC also has rewritten its bylaws and reconfigured its internal operations in the wake of a series of sex-abuse cases that shined a spotlight on the shortcomings of federations in dealing with athlete safety and well-being.

The agreement comes after months of negotiations about what, exactly, the arrangement should look like. Athletes have been pushing for a more independent voice and were wary of the USOPC wielding too much control over a new operation.

The athlete chair, Han Xiao, said the USOPC commitment "has the potential to be an incredibly significant moment in the history of the organization."

Wabash's Jared Holley slides into third base in a game against Oak Hill during his sophomore season.

Holley to continue sports career at Kankakee

By JACOB RUDE

sports@wabashplaindealer.com

Injury may have affected Jared Holley's plans for his future but it did not derail it. An ill-timed knee injury left him on the shelf in one of the more important summers of his career but only led to a detour for the Wabash senior as, last week, he signed with Kankakee Community College, a two-year junior college.

"Last year I had my knee injury so I missed that whole summer where there were supposed to be a lot of offers," Holley said. "Kankakee reached out and they're a junior college so I'll go a few years and get more exposure. (I'll get) my associate's degree or just my core classes out of the way and move on to a bigger college after that."

Kankakee is not a typical community or junior college, though. The school boasts one of the top baseball programs in the nation. Three years ago, the Cavaliers won the National Junior College Athletic Association Division II national title. Perennially one of the top programs in the country, Kankakee offers Holley a unique opportunity at the next level.

"It means a lot," Holley said when asked what it meant to get the chance to play at the next level, "definitely since no one in my family except my dad played on after high school. It means a lot to continue playing on (in college)."

Holley, who will major in business, served as an anchor on the field in his freshman and sophomore seasons and in the handful of games prior to his injury in his junior season with the Apaches, particularly defensively. In centerfield, Holley has a career .919 fielding percentage with just 11 errors in his 72 career games.

Offensively, Holley has a career .288 batting average with a .383 on-base percentage. His junior campaign shaped up to be his best as, in 19 games, he sported a .394 batting average with a .533 on-base percentage, both career-high marks.

Holley's junior campaign ended in a loss to Northfield due to a knee injury, but the Apaches rallied to capture a sectional title. Now, Holley will return for his senior campaign fully healthy and ready to help Wabash's sectional title defense.

But after his final season with Wabash, Holley will head to Kankakee and while he won't reach campus for many months, his plan will be simple once he does.

"Just continue to do what they do there because they're a pretty good program," Holley said. "They only lose about five, six, seven games a year so (I'll) just continue to do what they do."

Herbert, other Senior Bowl players hope staying put pays off

By JOHN ZENOR

Associated Press

MOBILE, Ala. — A year ago, Oregon quarterback Justin Herbert decided to stick around for his senior season instead of turning pro. Wisconsin linebacker Zack Baun didn't really have much choice.

Both had impressive final college seasons, including a head-to-head Rose Bowl matchup, and believe they're more NFL-ready now.

They're among the participants in Saturday's Senior Bowl game for senior NFL prospects and some junior graduates.

Some of them, including Baun, have only recently emerged as legitimate prospects. Others like South Carolina defensive tackle Javon Kinlaw and Michigan State defensive end Kenny Willekes stayed in college for one more season largely because of injuries. Ditto for Alabama linebacker Terrell Lewis.

"I wanted to be a better leader, a better teammate, a better quarterback," said Herbert, who would also have been a likely first-round draft pick last year. "All these things that I felt like I accomplished this year."

He did turn in perhaps his best season with 3,471 yards, 32 touchdowns and six interceptions. Herbert is one of the top quarterbacks in an upcoming draft where LSU Heisman Trophy winner Joe Burrow is the likely

No. 1 pick and some of the 99 underclassmen granted eligibility by the NFL are among the most coveted prospects.

Alabama quarterback Tua Tagovailoa is one of them and a potential top-5 pick.

Lewis, Arizona State running back Eno Benjamin, Texas A&M wide receiver Quartney Davis and Utah State quarterback Jordan Love are among the juniors in the Senior Bowl who have already graduated. Lewis, a fourth-year junior, and Love are widely regarded as potential first-round picks.

Lewis's fellow Alabama linebacker Anfernee Jennings opted to return for his senior season and try to improve his stock, and feels like he did just that.

Crimson Tide coach Nick Saban, who lost six underclassmen to the draft counting Lewis, said he advises all his juniors to leave if they're likely first-round picks.

"I think most of our guys have made a good decision that way," Saban said. "I think in Anfernee and Terrell's case, both, they certainly did themselves a lot of good by coming back. I think most of our players who have come back have been able to do that."

Herbert and Baun are hoping that call pays off for players like them, too.

Willekes (broken leg) and Kinlaw (torn hip labrum) both indicated they likely would have left after their junior seasons but for the injuries. Kinlaw especially is pegged as a likely first-rounder after earning first-team Associated Press All-America honors.

Willekes posted a career-high 10.5 sacks and

Kyrgios barks, mocks his way to Australian Open's 3rd round

By HOWARD FENDRICH

AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Love him or hate him — and make no mistake, there are plenty in each camp — Nick Kyrgios never allows for a dull moment when he's on a tennis court, whether it's shot selection, showmanship, momentum swings, barking at his entourage or mocking another player not even involved in the match at hand.

All of the above happened during his ever-eventful 6-2, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 victory over Gilles Simon in the Australian Open's second round Thursday night.

That included a moment when Kyrgios — currently on six months' probation from the ATP for verbally abusing tennis officials — poked fun at the man he might meet in the fourth round, Rafael Nadal. After being warned for taking more than the allotted 25 seconds between serves, Kyrgios mimicked how Nadal fidgets before a point, as if to remind the chair umpire that there are folks who more egregiously waste time.

When a reporter asked Nadal about Kyrgios' imitation of the 19-time major champion, the Spaniard replied: "I really don't care. I'm here to play tennis."

About the only boring segment of the proceedings came during the in-stadium interview, when an allusion was made to later rounds and Kyrgios, an Australian seeded 23rd, told the Melbourne Arena crowd, "I'm not thinking ahead. ... I'm just taking it one match at a time at the moment."

Zzzzzzzz.

After Kyrgios wrapped up, the No. 1-seeded Nadal was still in the early stages of what became a 6-3, 7-6 (4), 6-1 win against Federico Delbonis over at Rod Laver Arena.

Those results were the most intriguing of Day 4 at the year's first Grand Slam tournament, especially given the distaste Kyrgios and Nadal have for each other in a raucous rivalry that provided one of the highlights of Wimbledon in 2019.

Never too early to begin pondering a meeting with a quarterfinal berth at stake during Week 2 in Melbourne, with the popular Nadal facing the home-backed Kyrgios.

For that to materialize, Kyrgios first needs to beat No. 16 Karen Khachanov of Russia on Saturday, when Nadal plays No. 27 Pablo Carreno Busta in an all-Spanish matchup.

A massive overnight storm blew dirt all over town, turning the Yarra River brown and leaving traces of red dust on the blue courts Thursday. The playing surfaces required power washing, which delayed the start of action on some outside courts for more than four hours.

Among the noteworthy winners were U.S. Open runner-up Daniil Medvedev, who took a medical timeout because of a nosebleed late in the second set of his 7-5, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Spanish qualifier Pedro Martinez, along with two-time French Open finalist Dominic Thiem, No. 7 Alexander Zverev, No. 10 Gael Monfils and a trio of women who have been ranked No. 1 and own Grand Slam titles: Simona Halep, Angelique Kerber and Garbiñe Muguruza.

Jeter, Walker take different routes to Hall

By RONALD BLUM

AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Derek Jeter and Larry Walker rarely crossed paths during their time in the major leagues.

"There was one time in the Bahamas, playing blackjack, that we sat down for a little while with Matt Damon, and we sat there and played for a little while," Walker recalled of a gambling evening where athletes and thespians mixed.

A baseball odd couple, they sat on the dais in a penthouse hotel ballroom, baseball's newly minted Hall of Famers.

Jeter, a first-round draft pick, came within one vote of becoming the second unanimous pick.

Walker, a youth hockey player who took up baseball at age 16, was elected in his 10th and final try on the baseball writers' ballot, making it with just six votes more than the 75 percent required.

Finding out his plaque in Cooperstown will be adjacent to bronze of Yankees teammate Mariano Rivera, the first unanimous pick in a writers' vote, Jeter revealed some emotion.

"I don't care where they put them — I put me — put me in the restroom," he said. "But to be next to Mo is quite a thrill."

As always Mr. Cool, Jeter was unassuming, humble, collected and quick with a quip to deflect. Walker was more raw as they told stories of their passage from amateurs to elite: Of the 19,960 players to appear in a major league game, they will be Nos. 234 and 235 inducted to the Hall, according to its tally, including 134 chosen by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

"It doesn't get any better than this," Jeter said. "There's no more awards. There's no other place you can go. This is it."

Walker, like Jeter, put on the cream-colored Hall of Fame jersey. When he took the phone call Tuesday informing him of election, he was wearing a garish yellow-and-black SpongeBob SquarePants shirt. His 20-year-old daughter Canaan sent a text "Way to go, dad ... You're trending," he recalled.

"I knew we're going to go sit outside and hang out up front, so I just wanted something a little warmer," he said.

Antetokounmpo tells Williamson: ‘Don’t rush the process’

By JEROME PUGMIRE

Associated Press

PARIS — The NBA's reigning Most Valuable Player has simple advice for the player many are viewing as a future MVP after his show-stopping debut.

“Don’t rush the process,” was the message that Milwaukee Bucks star Giannis Antetokounmpo sent to Zion Williamson on Thursday from Paris.

The 19-year-old Williamson made his highly-anticipated NBA debut for New Orleans Pelicans against San Antonio Spurs on Wednesday night.

The NBA's No. 1 overall draft pick had the crowd on their feet and asking for more after scoring 17 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter of a 121-117 loss which took a back seat to Williamson's impact.

Antetokounmpo, an All-Star for the past three years, knows what it's like to be surrounded by hype and urged Williamson to take his time.

“You’re going to be a beast, the whole league knows you’re going to be a beast,” Antetokounmpo said in Paris, where the Bucks will take on the Charlotte Hornets on Friday. “Just take it step by step, day by day.”

Because of the time difference, Antetokounmpo was already asleep in his Parisian hotel when Williamson was putting on a show in New Orleans.

“I wasn’t able to watch it because it was late here. But when I woke up I watched the highlights and saw that he scored 17 points (in barely more than three minutes),” Antetokounmpo said. “It’s amazing. I’m really excited for him.”

Antetokounmpo is one of the front runners for the MVP title again this year, and will be looking for a fifth triple-double of the season against the Hornets, the first regular-season game to be played in France.

The 25-year-old Antetokounmpo is in stellar form himself. He had 28 points, 14 rebounds and 10 assists in just 31 minutes of the Bucks’ 111-98 win against the Chicago Bulls on Monday night, reaching a career milestone of 10,000 points in the process.

Williamson missed the first half of the season after having knee surgery, and Antetokounmpo urged the 6-foot-6, 285-pound rookie out of Duke not to push his body too hard, too early.

“Obviously he’s a tough kid. My advice that I give to him: just have patience, work hard and make sure you’re healthy,” he said. “Because I saw some highlights and saw he was wearing a sleeve on his knee that was hurting.

Don’t rush, don’t rush the process.”

NBA Commissioner Adam Silver thinks Williamson is well equipped to handle the pressure.

“It comes with the territory and he has been under a spotlight long before he even played in the national limelight at the Duke University,” Silver said. “He is going to be a social media star these days and again, it’s not easy for these young players, but I think he is built to be a big-time player and can handle these big moments.”

Wife of a serial philanderer plans ahead for his funeral

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 37 years. During that time, my husband has cheated on me and fathered several children.

As we have grown older, I have begun to think about final arrangements. If he dies, would I be wrong for not giving him a funeral or memorial service or having one for his sisters and brothers? I feel it would be disrespectful to me if the children that resulted from his affairs, and possibly their mothers, were there. Although my daughters love their father, I believe they would support my decisions. — Angry Wife In Georgia

DEAR ANGRY WIFE: You are under no obligation to have a funeral or memorial for your cheating husband. If his sisters, brothers, mistresses and their children would like to give him one, they can assume the responsibility. If you still feel the way you do today after his demise, you, your daughters and some close friends of yours can go out for a nice lunch or dinner to acknowledge the occasion.

P.S. Devil's food cake for dessert would be appropriate.

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced 10 years ago, when I was a freshman in college. My mom didn't want the divorce. My dad initiated it, but they fought constantly when they were together. Not long afterward, Dad started a relationship with a co-worker, his current wife, whom my mom believes was the reason he left her.

I am being married at the end of the year, and I know Mom won't be able to keep her emotions in check if Dad's wife attends. My parents can keep it amicable if it's just them, but I can't see a way to exclude Dad's wife without upsetting him. What's the less-painful option — my mom getting upset or my dad getting upset? — Wants Family Harmony

DEAR WANTS: Talk to your mother. Explain that you want your wedding to be inclusive, and you don't want this special day to be spoiled. If she feels she won't be able to control her anger, she shouldn't attend. To invite your father and not his wife will be regarded as an insult, and he would likely refuse to be a part of it.

DEAR ABBY: I married a man 24 years ago. At the time, I had a daughter who was 6. My new husband welcomed her, and she considers him to be her father. His parents, however, never considered her as their own. They took several family trips with all their grandkids but excluded my daughter.

Fast-forward to today: My daughter lives in another state. These nieces and nephews all have kids, as does my daughter. Every birthday and Christmas, I buy said nieces' and nephews' kids presents, but I assume because my daughter lives in a different state, no one buys her kids anything. Is it wrong that this upsets me? Should I continue buying gifts for all those kids when my daughter's kids are being left out? — Left Out In Illinois

DEAR LEFT OUT: You are not wrong. Considering the circumstances, you have been more than generous. Because your nieces and nephews are adults now, send them cards for the holidays. The same is true for their children. And if you are asked why, tell them the truth — that gift-giving is supposed to be an exchange, and your daughter was seriously shortchanged.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
